MOBB Protests She Kills Monsters

(February 22, 2016; Lansing, MI)--Monsters Organized for Better Behavior (MOBB) is asking its members and supporters to boycott an upcoming Lansing theatrical production. MOBB is upset that Lansing-based theatre company Ixion seems to be encouraging violence against innocent hobgoblins, trolls and kobolds with its next show, She Kills Monsters by Qui Nguyen.

"I'm no wizard," says MOBB spokesman O.G. Re. "But kills sounds like a bad thing to be doing to monsters."

MOBB first learned of the show when a trio of bugbears reported being assaulted by a pair of armored maidens wielding swords.

"Weze just asking for directions," said the bugbear spokesman, Broke Tusk. "One minute we're waving hello and next evil girls rained down pain and fury on us. All we wanted was directions to Old Town."

In light of the unprovoked violence, MOBB is suggesting that all monsters avoid The Robin Theatre, 1105 S. Washington Ave. Lansing, MI March 19, 20, 26 & 27. "Don't go, dangerous!"

MOBB will be holding a torch and pitchfork vigil to stop the violence.

"If you cut us do we not bleed," asks Re. "No matter how cool limited edition Ixion die is, not worth seeing monsters die."
